Alfalfa County commissioner candidates face runoff

Waynoka city sales tax measure loses by one vote

By Marione Martin

With three candidates running for the Alfalfa County Commissioner District No. 2 position, no one gained more than 50 percent of the votes. The top two, Michael Roach and Nelson Frantz, will face off in the primary runoff election Aug. 25. Roach received 209 votes or 47.83 percent while Frantz had 170 votes or 38.9 percent. The third candidate, Kevin Irwin, received 58 votes or 13.27 percent.

Two Alfalfa County candidates retained their offices. County Clerk Laneta Unruh defeated Shana Smallwood 859 to 417 or 67.32 percent to 32.68 percent. Sheriff Rick Wallace received 1,057 compared to 17.36 percent for his opponent Ryan P. McNeil.

The Alfalfa County sales tax proposition passed easily with 1,129 voting in favor (71.61 percent) and 393 against.

The City of Waynoka sales tax proposal went down to defeat by one vote, according to state election board results. The one percent sales tax was intended in part for capital improvements of the Waynoka Municipal Swimming Pool. Of the total 173 votes cast, 87 voted against the sales tax and 86 in favor. The Woods County Election Board said the county election results were certified at 5 p.m. Friday with no appeals or protests.

State Question 802 for Medicaid expansion passed by a narrow margin in Oklahoma June 30, garnering 50.48 percent in favor with 49.52 percent opposed. Unofficial returns list 340,279 votes in favor statewide and 333,761 against.

The measure will become part of the state constitution which will prevent legislators from enacting rules that could make it more difficult to qualify for coverage such as work requirements. Nearly 200,000 low-income adult residents are expected to gain health insurance through this measure which won’t go into effect until July next year. Expansion is estimated to bring a little more than $1 billion additional federal funds annually to Oklahoma, according to Amber England, the initiative campaign manager. The state will have to pick up 10 percent of the cost.

However, Alfalfa and Woods County voters disagreed with the state majority. Alfalfa County opposed the question 1,100 to 436 or 71.61 percent against. Woods County had 62.58 percent voting against the state question. The tally was 1,097 votes against and 656 in favor in the county.

In his home county, Roland Pederson of Burlington easily defeated his opponent in the Republican primary for State Senator District 19. In Alfalfa County, he collected 995 votes compared to 284 for David M. Mason of Enid. Pederson won in total district votes although the margin was narrower; he received 54.44 percent compared to 45.56 for Mason.

Grief and resilience

By Marione Martin

While we usually think of grief in terms of a death it can be more broadly defined as an emotion following a loss. During all the coronavirus pandemic restrictions, closings and cancellations, most of us have experienced losses. The biggest loss is predictability.

Even during reopening in this part of the country, much remains undecided. Many of last weekend’s 4th of July activities were scaled back. Some retail businesses are still seeing a slowdown in sales. The Nescatunga Arts Festival in Alva was postponed from June to Aug. 8. It appears there will be a Woods County Fair, but we’re not yet sure of the form. Schools are working on plans for fall classes. Uncertainty abounds.

A according to the National Center for Education Statistics, there were approximately 1 million candidates for an associate’s degree, 2 million for a bachelor’s degree and just over a million for an advanced degree. The majority of these were deprived of a graduation ceremony. Once graduated, many found themselves unable to continue into planned careers. Some had to move back home with parents.

Students who finished classwork at home as well as adults working from home have experienced the loss of routines and the socializing inherent in their usual schedules. They are facing uncertainty of what future school or work will look like.

Then there are the birthday parties, weddings and funerals that were canceled or minimized or postponed. We’ve been deprived of the celebrations we expect to mark joyous occasions. We’ve missed the closure and support of family and friends provided by funerals.

An article on grief is featured in the August 2020 issue of Psychology Today. In the article, New York psychologist Susan Birne-Stone is quoted, “We all lost what we thought our life would be on a day-to-day basis. There’s so much devastation right now that you just have to take a moment to acknowledge your own pain: I’m allowed to feel what I feel.”

While there have been articles and books about the stages of grief, it’s really not that predictable. In a book about his wife’s death, C.S. Lewis likened it to an airplane bombing – a big plane circles around, drops its load, takes quite a long time to come back, and then bombs again.

I recently read a book by Sheryl Sandburg and Adam Grant titled “Option B.” The book was written by Sandburg after her husband’s sudden death, leaving her with two small children to care for. Her friend Grant is a psychologist who contributed to the book.

Grant advised Sandburg to avoid the three P’s – personalization, pervasiveness and permanence. Personalization is the belief that we are at fault. Pervasiveness is the belief that an event will affect all areas of our life. Permanence is the belief that the aftershocks will last forever. Instead, the book points toward cultivating resilience, the strength and speed of our response to adversity.

Resilience is a continuing theme throughout the book. The title comes from the idea that Option A is our preferred outcome – still having that loved one in our lives and sharing experiences. Instead, Sandburg says if we’re stuck with the less desired Option B of going on alone, we should embrace it and give it all we’ve got.

Resilience is also a theme in the Psychology Today article. One quoted source is George Bonanno, the author of “The Other Side of Sadness: What the New Science of Bereavement Tells Us About Life After Loss.” He reports people who are resilient cry when asked to talk about the loss early on, but they haven’t lost their ability to laugh. In fact, minutes later, the majority are able to laugh.

Bonanno has identified a mindset that characterizes those who adapt to the loss without drowning in despair. They’re optimistic. They display a so-called challenge appraisal, which enables them to think, “Okay, I didn’t want this to happen. But what do I need to do to get beyond it?”

But before everything else, they engage with the stressful event with optimism and confidence in coping. Bonanno uses the term “flexibility mindset.”

Flexibility is the key to coping with today’s current climate of uncertainty. If you can’t change a situation, you can change yourself or your response to it.

Our lives may never return to exactly what they were before. We may even see changes for the better. If we remain optimistic and resilient and flexible, we’ll be able to cope with whatever the future holds.

Three options for students returning to Alva Public Schools this fall

By Marione Martin

In just over a month, students will return to classes in the Alva Public Schools (APS). Administrators, teachers and staff have been working all summer on a return to learning plan. Monday night, the Alva Board of Education approved the school’s learning options for this school year.

Last week the board was given a preview of the plan to study. APS Curriculum Coordinator Shane Feely summarized the plan and answered questions during Monday’s board meeting.

The first and preferred option is for classes in a traditional in-person setting. This is considered the optimal plan for learning. Students in this setting will also be able to participate in the usual extracurricular activities. If the school is required to close, like what happened after spring break, those in this option would move to online learning.

The blended option is a mixture of online and onsite learning similar to the alternative education offered in the past. This is only available to grades 6-12 because of staffing. These students may also participate in school extracurricular activities.

The third option is for fully virtual learning. Feely explained this option was set up for students who have family members at high risk for COVID-19 because of age or medical reasons. No extracurricular activities will be available to these students as it would defeat the purpose of protecting the vulnerable.

Students must apply for the blended or the fully virtual options and there will be counseling for the families to make sure this option is suitable. Once chosen, these two options are locked in for the semester.

Those students in traditional classroom learning could move to online if a family member gets sick or there is a family quarantine.

School enrollment forms and information may be found on the school website: www.alvaschools.com

Oath, Reorganization

Shane Hansen was the only board member absent Monday. Board member Larry Parker began his new term by reciting the oath of office before signing both the oath and the confidentiality statement.

The board then elected new officers. Jane McDermott will continue as president of the board. Tiffany Slater is vice president, Karen Koehn is clerk and Larry Parker is deputy clerk.

McDermott said of all the boards she has served on, “this happens to be the very best one. I appreciate each one of you (board members) and the way we have moved forward in the betterment of the Alva Public Schools.”

“Thank you, Mr. Argo for your leadership,” she continued. “Without you, our job would be a whole lot harder.”

Finances

Superintendent Tim Argo reviewed school finances, pointing out that gross production revenue from oil and gas was down almost one million dollars in the past year compared to the year before. There was some increase in motor vehicle tax revenue. However, Oklahoma schools have been told to expect decreases in all revenue streams as the effects of COVID-19 become more evident in the next months. “We don’t know what’s going to happen with the economy,” he said.

Building fund expenses last year were low at $69,277, but Argo said that is expected to increase this year as more of the maintenance expenses are moved over into the building fund. The school collects about $650,000 in the building fund “so it’s a very healthy fund,” he said.

Another change is an increase in payroll expenses in the child nutrition fund because cooks are being moved over from the general fund into the child nutrition fund.

“Looking at fund balances you can see Alva Public Schools have done well through your stewardship and superintendents before me,” Argo told the board. Projected balances are $6.1 million for the general fund with a $3 million carryover in the building fund and a $285,000 carryover in child nutrition. “Those are all very important because, if you notice, we continue to eat into that because economically things are slow. We’re not collecting like we were and so it’s really important as we move forward that we begin to be more conservative in our expenditures. That’s one of the things that we hear throughout the state, to make sure you’re conservative as we move into these uncertain economic times.”

In the activity fund, the year was

Testing Forages for Nitrates

Many hay producers will be baling forage sorghum and other hays in the coming days. Given the current heat wave, there is the potential that these forages may have stressed and accumulated nitrates at dangerously high levels. Oftentimes, producers bring a sample to the OSU Extension office for a “quick test” with diphenylamine to see if nitrates are present. If there is a reaction, the sample is sent to the OSU Lab for evaluation. The quick test allows producers to swathe the field with a general idea of which nitrate risk category the hay crop falls into.

The OSU Extension office is open and taking samples. We want to conduct the test and keep our staff and clientele safe. To have a sample tested:

1) Bring the sample to the office between 8am – 5pm and leave it for testing. There are forms at the drop-off area for your convenience.
   You will receive a call when the quick test is complete.

2) If you would like to enter the office and see the quick test conducted, just check in with the officers and receive a mask. To enter the office, you should call for an appointment – 580-327-2786.

Remember why we celebrate

By State Rep. Carl Newton

As we approach the Fourth of July holiday, I’m reminded anew of the love I have for the United States of America and the desire I have for all citizens of our great nation to appreciate our country and remain loyal to its cause.

The level of freedom and liberty we have in this nation is truly unparalleled in any other nation in the world. This does not come without cost. Ask anyone who planted a flag on the grave of a loved one on Memorial Day about the sacrifice in blood and tears that they and their loved one paid to secure such freedom. Ask any member of the military who today is serving at a post far from home about the lump they still get in their throat when they see the red, white and blue waving above them. Ask a veteran about the horrors they witnessed in war, the friends they lost, the difficulty of resuming normal life after serving for a cause so much bigger than many of us even realize.

When our nation’s founders fought and debated the case of independence from the tyranny of Great Britain, they were well aware of the cost of such a call. They had been involved in the American Revolution for more than a year by the time the final draft of the Declaration of Independence was finally approved on July 4, 1776. They already had lost brothers and sisters to the cause of freedom. They knew they would lose more. They took their bold action because they believed people deserved to be represented fairly by those who shared the same soil and understood the same soil. They wanted a say in how their taxes were spent. They wanted a voice in how they were governed. Most of all they wanted dear liberty, even at the cost of death.

As you enjoy this Independence Day – maybe by watching your children’s eyes light up as they watch fireworks or light sparklers, maybe by enjoying a barbecue or sweet watermelon, or by spending time at the lake or the pool, maybe just by having some time off work – please remember why we celebrate.

We celebrate so that all men and women might be free to enjoy life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. We celebrate for all the freedoms we enjoy – the right to own our own homes, to choose our own vocation, to raise our children in the manner we wish, to attend the church of our choice and worship God in the manner we choose and so, much more. On this day, I hope you will say thank you to God above for such freedom and for the vision and sacrifice of those who fought so valiantly to give it to us.

Happy July Fourth!

If I can help you with anything, you may reach me by email at carl.newton@okhouse.gov, or phone me at 405-557-7339. May God bless you and the State of Oklahoma.

Woods County commissioners approve new fiscal year contracts

Cameron Quick is proud to announce his candidacy for Sheriff of Barber County

Vote for Community, Integrity, Commitment

Native to Barber County, Cameron Quick graduated from South Barber High School but started his law enforcement career even before that at the Harper County Jail, where later he was promoted to jail supervisor. He brings a wide range of law-enforcement experience: Advanced training in Jail Management, Drug & Alcohol Enforcement, and De-escalation of Force techniques. His experience as a police officer and deputy sheriff in Barber, Pratt, and Harper counties uniquely qualifies him to understand the local dynamics of law enforcement while prioritizing service and protection of the community he calls home.

Additionally, he brings with him supervising and budgeting skills he developed during his time supervising detention deputies, patrol deputies, police officers, and International Security Teams for the U.S. State Department. Quick also reached the rank of Sergeant during his six years in the Army National Guard. During that time, he received many awards: The Combat Infantryman Badge, Army Good Conduct Medal, and two Army Commendation Medals for his actions in Afghanistan supporting Operation Enduring Freedom. Cameron Quick for Sheriff represents an opportunity to build a deep and lasting relationship between the Sheriff's Office and the community it serves. "I've spent my adult life serving and protecting both locally and abroad," Quick says.

"Effective policing starts and ends with trust and partnership between law enforcement and the community it serves. I look forward to expanding this initiative as Sheriff to lead Barber County forward together."

A Cherokee man was injured when his motorized bicycle had a mechanical problem Friday morning, July 3. The incident occurred at 11:16 a.m. on Greer Road, three-tenths of a mile west of County Road 600. The location is approximately 1.3 miles west of Cherokee in Alfalfa County.

Gene Leon Davis, 72, of Cherokee, was driving a Huffy motorized bicycle westbound on Greer Road. The bicycle experienced mechanical problems with the rear fender, causing Davis to lose control and impact with the roadway.

closed out in June with all accounts in good standing. A few years ago, the school started using a spreadsheet to track fundraisers so they could tell which ones had been completed, which ones didn’t occur and which ones are no longer being used.

“You can tell we’ve made some headway in reducing the amount of fundraisers,” Argo noted. “I appreciate our sponsors being mindful of that as they completed this year.” He said there were 116 fundraisers this year compared to 147 last year.

Superintendent’s Report

Supt. Argo had one resignation to report. Kanon Collins has resigned as sixth grade girls’ basketball coach. However, she will continue to teach middle school math.

Argo said the school continues to work with the architect and construction manager to make sure the art building plans are within the budget. “That’s a slow process, but we’re continuing to meet,” he said.

In preparation for bringing students back into the buildings for classes this fall, Argo said he and Supt. Daren Slater from Northwest Technology met with local medical professionals. They also looked at regional and state perspectives to plan for a safe start. “We continue to review that plan and continue to revise it as the situation changes.”

Next week Argo will be meeting with principals, teachers and support staff to review a plan together and get their feedback on safety and mitigation standards to use in bringing teachers and students back. “We’ve got a lot of work ahead of us.”

Two years ago the school embarked on a strategic planning process. “That is something we’re pausing right now,” Argo said. “We hope to pick up where we left off in the spring, but right now our focus is getting our students and staff and our families back to school.”

The superintendent recognized Trevor Lording, IT, and Shane Feely, curriculum coordinator, for their “tremendous amount of work” preparing an application for an incentive grant. The school received $20,000. “Not every school got one,” Argo said.

Other Business

The board approved administrative, teacher and support personnel salary schedules. They also approved extra duty salaries and assignments. Argo said positions still to be filled are 6th grade girls’ basketball coach, high school baseball assistant coach, middle school assistant football coach and middle school boys track coach.

With school being closed early, bus mileage was kept low for the year. There was also some concern about obtaining new buses in the current economy. It was determined the school could continue to use the current buses for another year. Argo said Ross Transportation sent some employees to perform maintenance on the buses so they are ready for use. The board approved an extended one year bus lease for five 2018 71-passenger buses with Ross Transportation.

Several service contracts were approved. Educational Based Services provides a psychologist to work with students on IEP’s (individual education plans). Jana Hickman, MS, OTR/L will provide occupational therapy for students. Jan Eden, PT, will provide physical therapy for homebound students. Precision Testing Laboratories, Inc. does the annual asbestos inspection and will handle removal if needed.

The board approved several updated board policies and also voted to rescind other policies that were duplicates or covered elsewhere in the policies.
